coordinator between 2014 and 2019. She also has served as Empire Elementary School's Parent Teacher Association president and as sergeant at arms for the Carson City Rotary Club, among other leadership roles in the community.

Williams, who attended the school district herself and graduated from Carson High School, has a degree in criminal justice from Western Nevada College and worked as a program officer in the Nevada Department of Corrections. She has served as a case investigator, emphasizing her experience handling a caseload of people who have been convicted of sex crimes against children and touting her experience of recent laws and bills passed in the 2019 legislative session to register their tier level. She also is a mother of two, with one attending Mark Twain Elementary School.

Williams told the board Tuesday she wanted to bring her skills and knowledge to the committee.

"I've seen a lot of juveniles (juvenile files) come across my desk," Williams said. "I've seen an uptick. I have a pretty good idea on teaching consent."

Trustee Lupe Ramirez thanked both candidates for applying.

"I'm very impressed that you wanted to make a difference," she said. "I appreciate your willingness."

Empire Elementary third grader wins age group in fire prevention poster contest

Carson City School District

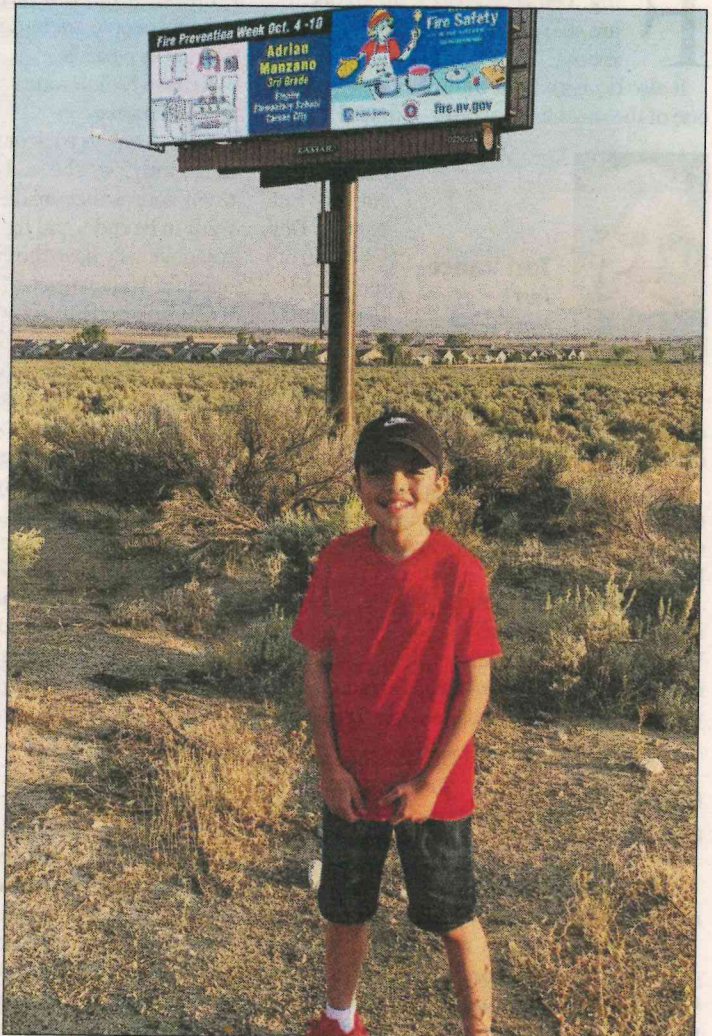

Adrian Manzano, a third grade student at Empire Elementary School in Carson City, was named winner of the State Fire Prevention & Awareness Poster Contest for his age category.

Manzano was honored with his poster placed on billboards throughout Nevada. Additionally, he received a plaque from the Nevada State Fire Marshal Division and recognition by the National Fire Protection Association.

This was the Nevada Department of Public Safety and the State Fire Marshal Division fourth annual poster contest. As part of the fire prevention and awareness campaign, several students arrived early before school to learn about fire safety and work on posters to submit to the contest.

Alyssa Butler, a ninth grade student with the Western Nevada College, Homeschool High School Program, also won for her age category.

A list of winners is available at <https://fire.nv.gov/uploadedFiles/firenv.gov/content/Home/Features/2020%20Poster%20Winners.pdf>
