property's use so they would need to acquire new permits to finish the interior.

"It is no use to us, there is nothing more we are going to do. And everyone we're entertaining will be doing something different," she said.

Fiegehen was at the meeting with Ted Stoever, senior vice president, Northern Nevada Land & Development Investment Services for Colliers International, the broker on the property.

Stoever said the property has garnered considerable interest.

"Most likely it is not going to be a hotel/casino as originally intended. It will be some sort of mix of retail and hous-
