

a
heir
ect of
ature

0 p.m. on Thurs-
ct. 25 at the
a State Museum's
Gallery, 600 N.
St. Doors open
m.
son, who's also an
t faculty member
ropology and ge-
y at the Univer-
Nevada, Reno,
en a member of
vada Board of
aphic Names since
The board's mis-
to advise the U.S.
of Geographical
s on new sugges-
research current
s of features and
in on controver-
hen presented.
nson will discuss
recent issues ing proposals for
eagan, Jefferson
Peak, Clemens
and George Ridge.
Frances Hum-
Lecture Series is
the fourth Thurs-
f each month at the
da State Museum.
ost for the lecture
for adults; free for um members and
ren 17 and younger.
ng is limited. Those
ing to attend should
ve a seat by visit-
www.nvculture.org/
dastatemuseumcar-
ity/events and click
ie "register here"
on the lecture de-
tion page.

C HEARING
UPERVISORS SALES
IRE AMENDMENT

Board of Supervisors (the "Board")
o be held on Thursday, November Center, 851 East William Street,
... amendment

Pioneer student receives Paula Cannon Service Award

By Rebecca Allen
Pioneer High School

In Montgomery, Ala., in 1957, Martin Luther King, Jr. said to the audience, "Life's most persistent and urgent question is, 'What are you doing for others?'"

Volunteering, helping, and serving play important roles in improving the well-being of individuals and their communities. Kaysie Beauford, a sophomore at Pioneer High School, has definitely caught the vision of volunteer work. Because of Beauford's efforts in volunteering, he became the first recipient of the Paula Cannon Service Award.

Cannon, a neighbor and supporter of Pioneer High School, wanted to honor students who are making a difference in their communities through volunteer efforts. Beauford spent many hours volunteering in the lunch room at PHS, serving lunch to other students and cleaning up after. Beauford also volunteered his time setting up and moving equipment for the Earth Day Garden Festival at the Foreman-Roberts House.

Beauford was "excited and happy" about receiving the Paula Cannon Service Award. He said he was especially glad "Pioneer High School students are being recognized for having a positive impact on the community." Beauford continues to volunteer because he knows it helps his community.

Currently, he enjoys putting volunteer hours in at Bulldog PC Repair and Cyber Cafe, fixing computers and appraising items. Beauford said the more people volunteer, the closer our community will become.

Kaysie Beauford recently was named the first recipient of the Paula Cannon Service Award.

NATURE'S ART

created by the children at Small Blessings Preschool, Carson City, Nevada