The band, under the direction of Nick Jacques, will present a variety of Christmas music from the lighter side of the holidays with "Poor Express" and "Sleigh Ride" to the more traditional carols, including, "Midnight In Bethlehem."

The band has been presenting free concerts since it was founded by Richard Doede in 1978 and consists of volunteer musicians from Carson City and the surrounding areas.

The age of the musicians ranges from 14 years old to 80-plus years old and rehearses every Thursday evening.

"We all just love to play our instruments and enjoy sharing this love with our community," said Carol Doede, a clarinetist and founding member of the band.

All concerts are free and while all the performers, including the director, are volunteers, there is still a financial responsibility required. Therefore, donations are accepted.

More than 450,000 acres of Nevada treated for wildfires in past two years

Nevada Appeal Capitol Bureau

Gov. Steve Sisolak said state and federal agencies have conducted forest and rangeland projects on more than 450,000 acres to reduce the risk of catastrophic wildfires in the state.

He said those projects were done under the Shared Stewardship Agreement formed by state and federal land management agencies across the West. That is a 47 percent annual increase over previous years.

Sisolak said for the first time in more than a decade, more acres were treated than burned by wildfires in Nevada.

Shared Stewardship pools the resources of all those agencies to work collaboratively to make progress on the create and maintain healthy forests and rangelands and create fire-adapted communities across the region.

"Wildfires have become an existential threat in Nevada for our families, communities, economy and the natural landscapes we love," said Brad Crowell, head of the Nevada Department of Conservation and Natural Resources. "Reducing wildfire starts with proactive management of Nevada's forests and rangelands to create healthy, resilient landscapes."

He said that requires collaboration and coordination at all levels, which is the goal of the Shared Stewardship Agreement.
